Note

A. Leroy Ingalls parents or grand-parents built the building and had a store that was known as the Grand Harbour Store. The store was run by Willie and Roy Ingalls who operated the store front only. It was a large building with a store front and living accommodations behind and above the store. It was ideally located along the main road and at the corner of the road leading to the Public Landing Wharf in Grand Harbour. The customers could arrive by land or water. The building still exists at its original location - 1163 Route 776 on Grand Manan Island, NB. The store part of that building has been used by a dentist, two druggists - Dr. Weldon and Dr. Dunlop from Doaktown, and a barber. In recent years, Allison Daggett has maintained a store selling nautical or marine equipment. He also operated the first TV cable company payment office on Grand Manan - Fundy Cable. Just recently, Allison has sold his business to Mark Morse who is operating out of the store front. The Daggett family continue to own and live in the building.

Scope and content

This fonds consists of handwritten and typed transcripts of oral interviews conducted to preserve the local history of the Grand Harbour Store on Grand Manan Island, New Brunswick. Natalie Urquhart, Archives Assisand, conducted two interviews for the Archives in 2006 to preserve the local history of the Grand Harbour Store. No sound recordings were made. The first oral interview was with Merlene Atkinson whose grandparents lived in a part of the building. The second interview was with Owen Ingalls Jr. (known as Jr.) on October 8, 2006 in his home in Seal Cove, Grand Manan.
